Join us - grow healthy foods at sea

Kerteminde Maritime Gardens

Mussels and seaweed are healthy and delicate foods that everyone can take part in growing in the Kerteminde Bay.

Kerteminde Maritime Gardens is the name of a new association. Its purpose is to:

- Run and develop sustainable maritime gardens in Kerteminde Bay for growing marine foods such as mussels and seaweed.
- Support the development of marine, recreational areas for the good of the local outdoor life and tourism.
- Collaborate with other local maritime initiatives and activities in the Kerteminde Municipality in order to promote knowledge on sustainable exploitation of marine resources among these the production of maritime foods.

Everybody is welcome to join the association, whether you are a resident of Kerteminde or not.

Maritime gardens

A maritime garden is an installation at sea for growing marine produce such as mussels, oysters or seaweed. In other words a kind of allotment or kitchen garden on the open sea.

A unit of The University of Southern Denmark with base in Kerteminde has done research in the cultivation of mussels in the Kerteminde Bay. Their research shows that it is possible within one season to grow ready-to-eat mussels, so-called mini mussels.

Our ambition is to establish an installation for growing mussels and seaweed. The maritime garden will be run in the style of a common allotment with the members jointly taking part in the keeping of the garden.

Another ambition of ours is to cultivate the social aspect of sharing something special as the sea as a larder.

Activity-groups

A number of activity groups has been set up, for the members to join. Our aim with the groups is to develop as active an association as possible, where those that wish to can participate in the activities that interest them.
